

Not before time realistically. Let's not get into the Politics here. But at least they have had the decency to admit that Universal Credit simply isn't working.

" The rollout of Universal Credit will be delayed until 2023 after an open rebellion from Tory MPs amid warnings it would become a "poll tax" moment. The system, which merges six benefits into one payment, has been beset with problems amid warnings it will leave people facing hardship. Esther McVey, the Work and Pensions Secretary, said that the "migration" of claimants onto Universal Credit will not start until next Summer. " - https://www.telegraph.co.uk/politics/2018/10/16/universal-credit-rollout-delayed-2023-rebellion-tory-mps/